"As One Who Serves"

This has been the motto of Scona for many years. Have you ever stopped to wonder what it means to you?

To serve means to be useful. For many years now, we have been going to school, but for what purpose? Hopefully, we have learned the value of service. Many students have served the school by joining clubs, participating in athletics, supporting school functions, and so on. However, service does not stop when we leave school. After the completion of our education our diverse paths will lead us to serve in many different ways. Some of us will develop ideas to further man's knowledge; some will become leaders in the community. But, most of us will serve in more mundane, but equally valuable ways.

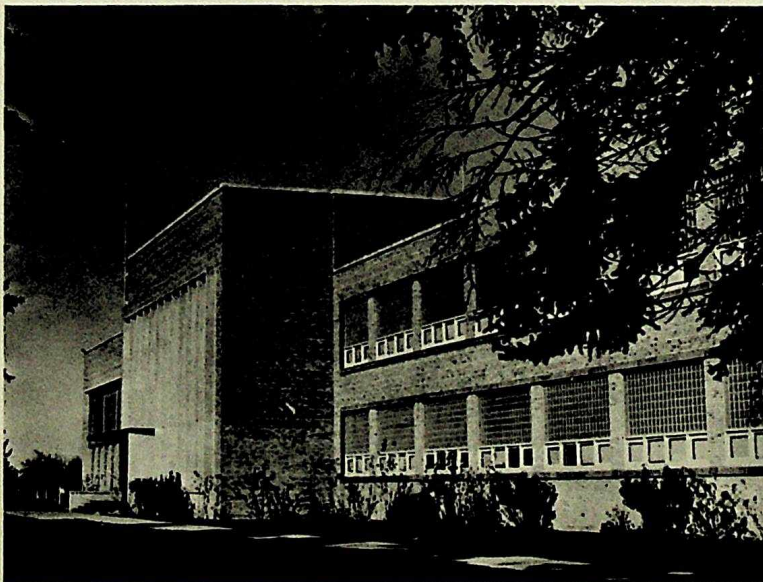

"As One Who Serves" is our motto and deserves some thought. How are you going to apply it to your life?

- Joan McCalla

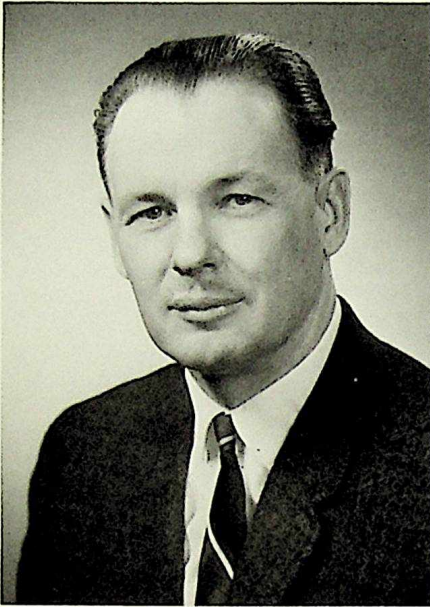

(1907 - 1955)

This, the thirtieth edition of the TRICOLOR, is dedicated to the students who have attended Scona over the past sixty years. Their contributions to our school and to the world, and their successes in many fields have given to us the high standards of achievement towards which Sconaite of today strive.

A Thirtieth Yearbook Wish

I congratulate the TRICOLOR staff for the preparation of our thirtieth yearbook - a treasured volume of our days at this school. I commend, too, the students of 1967 - 1968 for the wonderful school spirit that has produced the many achievements that are recorded in our school history.

It is my wish that our endeavours here will serve you well. Go forth, proud that you have been a part of Strathcona. Take with you honesty, vigor, and joy of living - the world has need of you.

The Governor-General's Visit

On November 7, 1967, Strathcona was honored by the presence of the Governor-General of Canada, Rt.-Honorable Roland Michener and his charming wife. In honor of his visit, he unveiled the Michener Entrance. After giving a brief memorable speech, he declared a holiday. Strathcona will remember his visit for years to come.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

BILL AVISON
President

President's Message

With the passing of another year at Strathcona we may look back in retrospect with deep pride. We can remember the end of the Centennial Year which was climaxed by the visit of the Governor-General to our school and be glad that we were able to share it with so many friends.

We have seen the beginning of Strathcona's Diamond Jubilee and have read the history of one of the oldest high schools in Edmonton.

Throughout the year, we shared the moments of glory with our school teams. We went together to Gaylord's Feast, romped through the Kickapoo Kaper and competed together in the Muk-Luk events.

For those leaving Strathcona, some will be leaving behind their many friends but will, I am sure, carry with them many memories. For those continuing on, most students will look forward to new experiences and new memories.

Without the continuous efforts of Mr. Stratte and Mr. Wilson, the Students' Union advisors, all this would not have been possible. I should like to thank them for their contributions. I say thank you to the Students' Union Executive and the Room Representatives also, who have worked endlessly all year.

To those leaving Strathcona and to those remaining: best of luck in all your future endeavours.

The task of the Room Reps. is vital to the efficient functioning of student government. Room Reps. represent their room at all student council meetings, and report back all proceedings. It is their duty to promote school spirit and act as a liason between the student body and the council executive.

* * * * *

The Athletic Councils are responsible for many of the more unusual events during the school year. Besides organizing the Obstacle Race, the Bicycle Race, and the Roller Derby, the Council is responsible for decorating the Christmas tree put in the Main Rotunda every year.

* * * * *

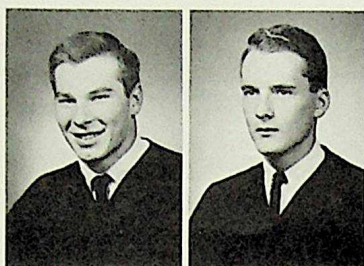

The Activities Board plans all activities within the school, and all the major dances.

* * * * *

The Publicity Board is in charge of the publicity of all school events; all posters in the school must meet with their approval.

WELCOME TO SCONA!

The TRICOLOR staff would like to welcome Mr. C. Jolin to our school as Head Caretaker.

C. JOLIN
Head Caretaker

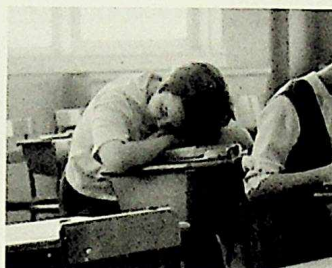

Finally . . . the good part!

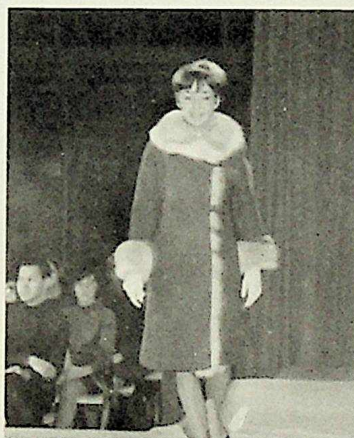

*The better to eat
you with, my dear!*

Visions of sugar plums.

Is this a case of putting the cart before the horse?

Fur out fashions!

FISH!!

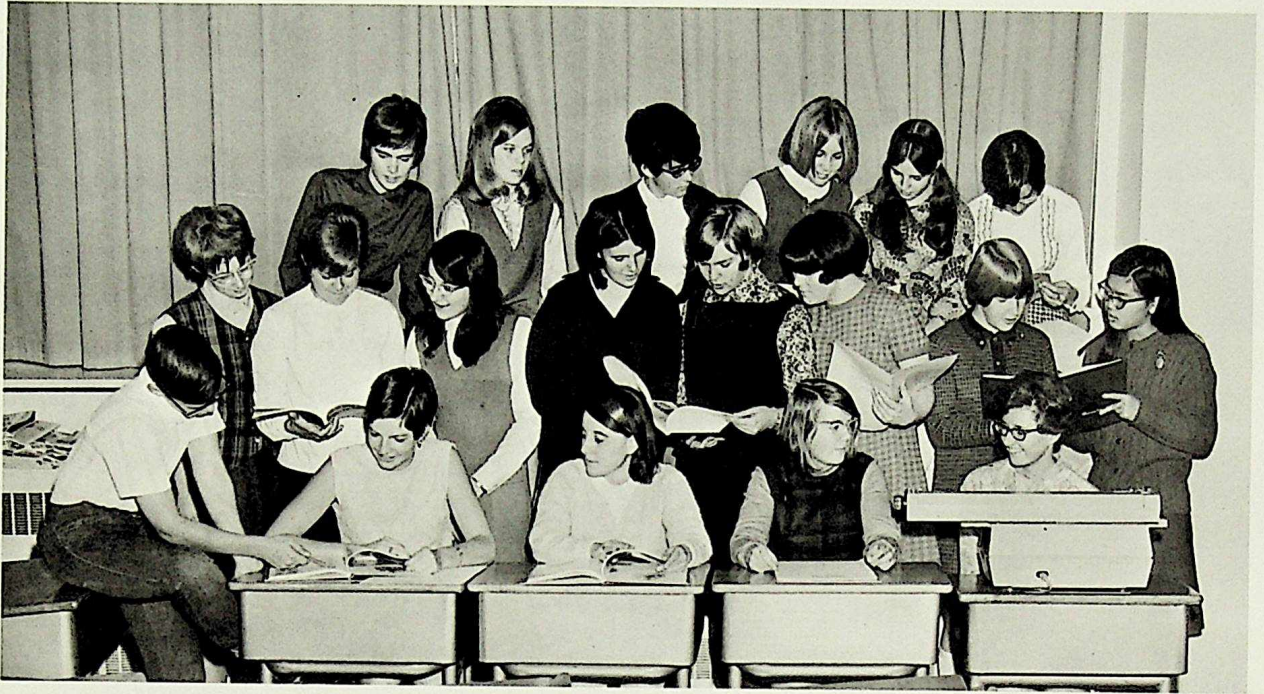

*I'll fix
HIS wagon!*

FIRST PRIZE

"Winter"

*In Polar nights when the moonlight
Shines and the North Wind blows;
Any stooping girl as pale as pearl
Will gather the frost flowers where they blow.*

*This is the season that old men elude but not I;
The snow hid hills throb, throe on throe
And meadow rivulets with anguish overflow
And churn amongst themselves but still they could not flow.*

*Games climb to a place set snow free
And drift slow in slumber to the edge of the world we see
And wait till the North Wind folds its wings; lean,
Like an eagle's wings over a field of green.*

- Yogi Sharma

SECOND PRIZE

"Live with Enthusiasm"

*Youth is not a time of life, it's a state of mind,
It's a temper of the will, a quality of the imagination,
A vigor of emotions, a predominance of courage over timidity,
Of the appetite for adventure over love of ease.
Nobody grows old by merely living a number of years,
People grow old by deserting their ideals,
Years wrinkle the skin, but to give up enthusiasm
Wrinkles the soul.
Worry, doubt, self-distrust, fear and despair -
These bow the head and turn the growing spirit
Back to dust.
Whether six or sixty, there is in every being's heart
The love of wonder, the sweet amazement at the stars
And the star-like things and thoughts.
The undaunted challenge of events,
The familiar childlike appetite for what - next,
And the joy of the game of living.
You are as young as your faith, as old as your doubt,
As young as your hope, as old as despair.
So long as your heart receives messages
Of beauty, cheer, courage, grandeur and power from the earth
From man and from Infinite, so long as you are young.
When all the wires are down,
And all the central places of your heart are covered
With the snows of pessimism and the ice of cynicism,
Then, and only then, are you grown old,
Old indeed, and may God have mercy on your soul.
And take these words;
"Live every day of your life as though you expect to live forever."*

"Meadow of Love"

*The pressure of the sea against the rocks
The wide open meadows of salt water
The tide brings forth bells of love
Places to go to, places to come from,
Sea to shore, mountain to valley,
To keep me awake at night I hear
The pounding of your heartbeat - but no
It is the pounding of waves on the sand
Even the salt sprayed air
Tells me I must have you
Across this vast meadow
I will find a peace of mind
A place where I will be satisfied
To find someone, something, or somehow
When I reach there I will not give up
For to give up is wrong.
This meadow holds peace for all
But not for me
Life will never end for me there
The salt rock, the wind torn love
Is there for me to find, to cherish,
And to hold.
But what is love?
Without you it is nothing
Across this prairie your love awaits
I live for it
Not to have and hold just for now
But for eternal life.*

thoughts of a math class. . .

the waves of unhappiness
are slowly climbing into the shaded corners of my eyes why must I always say goodbye
when I want to say hello forever and ever as long as I want what you want then we are friends
I may stay as long as I want but now I can't fight what I feel I don't want to but you want me to so now I must go
mustn't cry
not in a math class
what would they think they'd laugh
everyone'd laugh
nobody'd understand
oh God I must run
where, where forever
someone told me
if the holes in a binder don't fit
then throw it away
but what if you're the binder or worse
what if you're the holes
and the binder, your life
if I should die
you'd call me a coward
but then I'm running away anyway and my destiny
doesn't matter very much anymore and I could say hello forever and ever.

FIRST PRIZE

"Youth"

We are Youth.

Rowdy, rough, profane,
Happy, laughing, hilarious,
Sighing, sobbing,
Dreaming, screaming,
Trusting, caring,
Cruel, hating,
Youth.

Through the eyes of Youth, the word is Mad.
A color-crazed, careening carousel
Of sin and virtue,
Whole music pumps and shrieks and pushes
In our ears.

They call us children.
How often have we heard them say, "Grow up"?
We love and live and weave our dreams,
As real to us as theirs to them; and yet they say
"How do you know?"
"You are too young."

We try to tell them how we feel
And run away with tears of blood
When laughing, they aim to stab us full
Of their beliefs and morals and their fears.
They strive to reach us with their tales of knowledge,
And stumble on the ragged steps within our minds.
They say that we are searching, growing, immature.
Indeed we are.
For who but us could play our music,
Tuneless, howling jungles,
And still sing?
And who but us could live our day
Of shining, perfect, pure delight,
And sail on to face the next,
Stagnant, black and brown?

We are Dreamers of Tomorrow. . .wise or wrong?
We are Pacifists of Tomorrow. . .sincere or self-preserving?
We are Makers of Tomorrow.

We are Youth.

- Beverley Ross

THIRD PRIZE

We stand on the shore
and watch the path
of the moon dance
on the soft silky black marble in tune with the jumping starlight

And a snake tells us
we're naked so we get dressed and come back
but this time we see only an old rusty anchor
and a broken beer bottle
in the green slime
at our feet.

THE OBJECT OF IT ALL

by Lee Hutchings

Have you ever noticed how seemingly inanimate objects suddenly develop personalities when you are behind the wheel of a car? One such example is the widespread and highly publicized suicidal tendencies of the telephone pole. Every year hundreds, even thousands, of these self-destructing creatures leap into the path of an unsuspecting automobile. I am sure you have encountered a victim of one of these maniac poles who will swear my previous statement true. A very close relative of mine had a disagreement with a police officer over this very point. Unfortunately the sneaky pole had staggered back to its original position supporting his car like a belt around its waist so that he was unable to verify his argument.

Signs giving pertinent information as to the speed limit, junctions and directions are noted for their personality quirk of hiding from the motorist. Speed signs especially delight in standing behind large, leafy trees where they go unnoticed by the wary motorist. The motorist must then proceed with haste until he can locate a sign giving the proper speed. Some of the more fortunate people are stopped and given a nice little ticket with the speed painstakingly written out on it. You would be surprised to hear how many of our fine citizens scorn this courtesy. There is a rumor going around about a rapidly aging man who has been driving about the Groat Road Interchange hopelessly lost since August 1967. This is undoubtedly due to the fact that the directional signs are constantly playing hide-and-seek or guess-where-my-arrow-is-pointing with the already confused drivers. It seems possible then that this story is true because everyone down there looks lost.

Traffic lights have their cute little tricks as well. They stay green for an extremely long time allowing everyone through the intersection except you. This only happens when you are in a hurry, however. Lights have developed an accurate sense of timing and can pick out the people in the biggest rush and turn red just in time to halt the hurrying party. If you are trying to get something accomplished while the light is red (such as recovering the lighted cigarette you dropped trying to make a green light two blocks back) you may just as well forget it because every light will now be green. There is one light of my acquaintance that really knows how to hurt a motorist. This particular light is at an intersection just before a train track. When the train is coming the light turns green but as soon as an extra long freight goes by, it turns red. This metal mass of blinking bulbs will also stay red when you are stopped on the tracks and the barriers start coming down on either side of you for the express. This shows a sadistic streak, I think.

There are other objects that have personalities: garage doors, traffic circles, and curbs. All of the mentioned have one thing in common - they have distinct feelings of animosity towards all automobiles. They lash out at them whenever it is possible. Curbs and traffic circles are the worst for biting tires, bending the rims, and tripping the car. They feel it is their undeniable right to keep all cars in line even if it means going out of their way to do it. Garage doors harbor special grudges caused by acute feelings of desertion. They try to detain the car as much as possible by grabbing on to the automobile's sides as it attempts to get out of the garage.

I think that if all automobile owners presented a united front to these malicious objects we could overcome them. I do not feel that it is entirely their fault. They are merely products of a bad environment and with proper medical counselling could be aided in becoming useful members in the community. Instead of blaming drivers and having driver-training courses, we should have object-education courses. Very few are aware of this menace but it is not yet too late to prevent their taking over the world. Please help me!

SECOND PRIZE

THE DANGERS OF CANADA'S CREEPING SOCIALISM

by David Macphail

Medicare is of growing concern to everyone in Canada. To some people, it is a great step forward in the economic and social development of Canada. To me, it is an equally great step backward, towards socialism.

Before I discuss socialism, I must make sure there is a clear understanding of what it is I am talking about. Socialism is the political system which puts all the people of a nation together to work in co-operation towards national goals, and to share equally in the fruits of their labors, regardless of their individual skill or effort.

The second point that must be made is that Canada is becoming socialistic. One only needs to look at the long list of welfare benefits to be convinced of this: Family Allowance, Unemployment Insurance, Old Age Pensions, Medicare, and many others. Your tax money is being arbitrarily "shared" with everybody else in Canada. There are many people receiving this money who could take care of themselves quite well if they had to. For instance, there are many collecting Unemployment Insurance because "they can't find a job", even though there are thousands available across Canada. The heavy taxes to pay for these many welfare benefits is slowly evening out the money in Canada. Although this is not true socialism, we're getting there fast enough.

As good as socialism may sound to some people, it will ultimately never work properly. It does not take into account the fact that we humans are not perfect. For example, socialism gives equal returns to everyone, regardless of skill or effort, or lack of it. There is no regard for putting in extra work, or having a higher education. The result is that the populace produces just enough to get by on, and no more. This happened in Russia for years until the start of "creeping capitalism", when they gave meagre rewards for extra work. In short, socialism kills the incentive to work.

Another area in which socialism ultimately fails is in government. In order for a socialistic society to function properly, everything must be controlled by the government. It must set the goals, it must collect the wealth and distribute it evenly, it must control the people in their co-operative groups. This creates a very powerful government; too powerful, as a matter of fact, especially if it gets in the wrong hands. This is the case in Russia and China today. Control slipped too easily into the hands of one man, or small group of men. The "great gains" in these countries are due to autocratic government, not socialism.

One of the great pitfalls of socialism is security. People love security, but even though socialism gives them security, it gives it great cost. In Britain, the factory worker has nothing to worry about, except how to pay the crushing taxes needed for the upkeep of their socialism. In Russia and China, the people have paid for their security with the much higher price of personal liberties.

In view of the ultimate results of socialism and some of the sad examples in the world today we have no choice but to stop this trend toward socialism. Our economy is already bogging down because of excessive taxes. If we continue as we are, we cannot hope to compete with the thriving, capitalistic countries such as Japan and United States. We must stop socialism before it stops us.

THIRD PRIZE

CONFORMITY

by Chris Jenkins

Conformity is an important issue. Many high school and university students are openly and violently protesting it through the "hippie" movement. These students are striving to find a better way of existence. Their mediums are various drugs and narcotics. Although some of them are actually trying to find something different or better, the majority of them are merely causing trouble and making it rough for the rest of the teenagers. However, we must take a stand on the merits or evils of conformity.

A fairly important question then, is: why do we conform? Webster's NEW WORLD DICTIONARY defines conformity as "the condition or fact of being in harmony or agreement; action in accordance with rules, customs, etc." One of the biggest reasons people conform is because of public opinion. Girls wear mini-skirts because all their friends do. Boys don't wear baggy pants because they are afraid that they would get laughed out of school and because nobody else does. Another big reason is that the laws of our land, backed by considerable experience and the majority of the people, compel us to do certain things, such as driving on the right hand side of the street and stopping for red lights, which we might consider conforming. These laws are also made to protect us. Keeping up with the Jones' is still another reason. Although the Jones' may have started something new, soon other people start following them, and whatever they started becomes yet another thing to conform to. The "hippie" movement, once non-conformity, is beginning to be conformity, as more and more youth join the movement each year. Customs, too, are a form of conformity. Although they are sometimes sneered at, we must remember that they have grown because of climatic and geographical conditions, as well as experience. We conform then, because our friends do and because it is in many instances to our advantage to do so.

Conformity is in some cases something to be strictly avoided. Many people in this modern day and age are completely disinterested in life because they get into a routine which they repeat nearly every day of the year, year-in and year-out. This is especially prevalent in the adult world. They get up in the morning, work each day from approximately eight-thirty A.M. until five-thirty P.M., come home, eat supper, go to bridge club, bowling or watch television, every day of the year, and then wonder why they are so unenthusiastic about life. Conformity compels us to listen to a certain type of music, wear a certain type of clothes and participate in certain types of extra-curricular activities. This squelches individualism and makes people behave like sheep. This aspect of conformity is extremely undesirable.

However, without a certain degree of conformity our country would be in complete and utter chaos. Laws are a type of conformity. They are designed to protect society and the welfare of the people. They dictate that everybody drive on the right hand side of the street, obey traffic regulations and other things. They are supposed to give everyone the same opportunities and privileges. Laws also keep the land functioning with a certain degree of harmony. People go to work at a certain time because it is the best time for their job to be done. We sleep at night because we are tired and because the darkness imposed by the lack of light makes it the best time for rest. So, we conform because experience and wisdom show that some things are necessary to everyday life.

As I have illustrated, conformity can be both good and bad. We must conform because common sense tells us there is a time for some things and another time for others. Conforming, if it goes against our moral principles and common logic, however, can be very undesirable. Although I have not taken a stand one way or another, I hope that I have helped you to formulate your own opinions.

THAT DAY

by Ross Harvey

Fundamentally, that day was not unlike any other day that John had gone through. It started at 6:30 in the morning with a cup of deep black coffee served in a cup with no handle remaining, a piece of burned toast reluctantly coughed up by his old toaster, and a short glance at the headlines on the front page of the Daily Gleaner. Mrs. Walker, the ancient keeper of this even older two-floor rooming house had, as always, entered his room punctually at 7:45 to warn him that if he didn't leave for work soon he would be late. The only difference at all in the morning so far was that John noticed that Mrs. Walker must have had a cold as her eyes were quite red and watery.

As he hopped into his Chevrolet, John glanced at the sky and noticed that there were no clouds in it. A typical fall day, thought John, as he drove slowly down the driveway and into town.

It was only about a quarter of a mile out of town that the first incident happened. Another car, coming in the opposite direction suddenly swerved out of its lane across the road into John's lane. There probably would have been a very serious accident if John had not seen the on-coming car and veered over into the other lane. The two cars scraped sides, but that was all. Some drunk, thought John, as he entered Dalton city limits.

It was 8:30 when John finally climbed up the long and dingy stairs to his office on the second floor of the Hale Construction Limited Building. He complacently punched his card in the proper slot and settled down to work. It was funny, he thought, but everyone seemed to have watery eyes.

It was at 9:15 that Mr. Bolson, John's boss, came into the room and walked over to John.

"John," he said, "I would like you to go over to the Browning construction site. They seem to be having a little trouble over there with the drainage system."

So it was fifteen minutes later, John found himself at the Browning site on the west end. He immediately set about inspecting the sewerage leads. It was while he was inspecting one of these leads that the heavy bulldozer just about clipped him.

He was carefully criticizing one of the entrance valves to a main lead on the left side of the site when he heard a grinding noise followed by a short hiss and a blasting roar that shook the very ground. Whirling around to see what had caused the noise brought him face to face with one of the company's largest bulldozers and it was coming at him at top speed. John managed to leap to one side just in time to see the heavy cat plummet into a deep sewerage ditch. There was no one in it.

It took two hours after that to sufficiently clear up the problems surrounding the drainage system, but when he was done, John decided that a good cup of coffee and a few hotcakes would do him well. So he headed to the main part of town for a bite to eat.

After giving his order, John walked back to his seat and gazed out the cafeteria window into the great expanse of the Alberta plain. It was now just after noon and the day was making marvelous progress towards being one of the best days that he could remember.

It was not long before a waitress came running forward with his order. John used five pats of butter on just one hotcake and literally sank it in maple syrup. He cut off a rather large chunk and slowly shovelled it into his waiting mouth. With a loud yell, he jumped up immediately and began to cough out the once luxurious hotcakes. Having finished this fit, he proceeded to page the cook in the language that construction men usually reserve for themselves and that lets one know that they mean business in no uncertain terms. But, the cook was nowhere to be found.

Two hours later, John was just about to go out on his coffee break, having completed plans for the new commerce building to the complete satisfaction of Mr. Bolson. He was almost out the door when suddenly, almost out of nowhere, one of the firm's junior employees came rushing at John, brandishing a ten-inch long lead pencil. He lunged at John and tore a long gash in his right arm. Then, the fellow ran out of the building convulsed in hysterical laughter. John had noticed one thing about him. His eyes were red and watery.

John had been waiting in the doctor's office for only five minutes when he came out into the lobby, smiled at John, and beckoned him into his office.

The doctor welcomed John into his office and bade him sit in his raised chair that so much resembled a dentist's or a barber's chair. John sat back and relaxed. He was thinking about the car on the way to town and the hotcakes in the cafeteria and the bulldozer and the junior employee. It was almost as if there was a giant plot afoot to kill him.

John's train of thought was interrupted by a giggle from the back of the room. He whirled around in the chair to see the doctor clutching a long needle. The doctor was now giggling uncontrollably and his eyes were bright red and very watery.

John immediately ran from the office and leaped into his car. He drove like a mad dog all the way to the Hale Construction Limited Building.

As he rounded the last curb and came down upon the building, a strange sight met his eyes. All the employees of Hale Construction Limited were out in front of the building and they were all consumed in laughter! When they saw John, they immediately started running towards him. This was the signal to throw the accelerator to the floor. He sped through the crowd and down the road to his rooming house. But the crowd had also assumed positions in company cars and they were in hot pursuit.

John burst through the front door of the house and ran into the kitchen. There was Mrs. Walker, cutting meat like she always did for dinner. Slowly she turned to face John.

Uttering a cry of surprise and fear, John backed off. Mrs. Walker's eyes were extremely watery and were as red as the prairie sunset John had so often seen. Slowly she raised the knife she was using above her head. She started to chuckle as she advanced towards John.

John ran upstairs with all the speed his shaking legs could muster. He slammed his bedroom door behind him and bolted it shut. No sooner had he accomplished this than he heard a noise outside. It was most of the people who lived in Dalton. They were all laughing and giggling. And they all gazed up at John. And they all had running, blood-shot eyes.

Slowly the assembled group walked inside. John could hear them quite plainly making their way up the stairs.

"Who are you?" screamed John. "What do you want?"

There was nothing in the way of answer save the eternal chuckling of the mob coming closer and closer.

"Why?" screamed John. "Why? WHY?"

The crowd had now broken through the door and were slowly milling towards the corner where John was kneeling. There was Mrs. Walker with her knife. There was Mr. Bolson with a hammer. And the doctor with his needle. They all slowly advanced towards John amid the now deafening laughter which was drowning out John's screams.

Outside, the sun was just dropping out of view over the Rocky Mountains casting pink light on the few clouds in the sky. And all was beautiful and still in the last few moments of that day.

SECOND PRIZE

THEN ALL WENT DARK

by Ron Saunders

The elevator hummed and a strange sensation in my stomach gave me a feeling of weightlessness as we descended hundreds of feet below ground level to the suspended animation project center. Four men in immaculate white uniforms were escorting me to the suspended animation machine. I was to journey to the future, never to return. For the past few weeks I lay awake at nights thinking about the world I was leaving and wondering about the world I was to see after a three hundred year sleep. I had no fear of leaving the twentieth century, in fact, at times I looked forward to it. The world today is in a chaotic state. Every country is suffering from some sort of strife. Here we are just a few years from the twenty-first century and on the brink of disaster. Employment is low, either because of unions calling strikes every day, or because of an acute lack of jobs which only the best educated can obtain. Inflation is so extreme that the cost of living has quadrupled in ten years. There are very few regions left in the world that are not hindered by overpopulation and famine. Very little democracy is in use anymore. Ruined economies, wars, and political unrest had put an end to the few representative governments that were left in the world. I only hope that three hundred years will provide man with enough time to learn that he cannot exist in such a state. By the time the suspended animation machine releases me in the twenty-third century, man will have reformed and I will awaken to a beautiful world with no suffering or distress. I was worried, however, about the possibilities of a nuclear war. Ever since the nineteen-sixties when the United States went to war against North Vietnam and later against North Korea, World War III became a possibility. In the latter nineteen-seventies when Red China declared alliance to North Vietnam and Korea, the War seemed inevitable. If a nuclear war does break out while I am in suspended animation, I pray that I will be destroyed with the rest of the world.

The elevator eased to a stop and the door clanked open. A long brightly illuminated hallway stretched before me. Massive concrete girders supported the granite ceiling. A large reinforced steel door terminated the corridor. I stepped out of the elevator, followed by my escort. The walk to the steel door seemed endless. One of the men presses a button on the wall and the large door rolled open. There was the machine, monstrous in proportion, and surrounded by rows of computers with flashing lights, numerous switches and twirling tapes. Technicians in white uniforms swarmed around the machine like bees in a hive. The main unit where I was to be contained was a large metallic cylinder out of which protruded a number of pipes. These pipes were connected to secondary machines and computers. I noticed one large pipe led to a strange piece of apparatus that was covered with frost. I inquired what its purpose was and was told that it is a refrigeration unit that produced liquid nitrogen that would freeze my body to a temperature of -345 degrees Fahrenheit. The whole operation was situated in a cavern carved out of solid rock. Steel supports reinforced the walls and ceiling to make the machine almost invulnerable. Anything that could destroy the machine from outside the cavern would have to have the force of an atomic bomb.

Before I entered the machine I was given a general anaesthetic. I became very drowsy and the people and bright lights around me seemed to be far away. A General shook my hand and wished me luck. They put me inside the big cylinder and sealed the entrance. A sharp tingling sensation ran down my spine. Then all went dark.

THIRD PRIZE

ELEGY

by Sandra Campbell

There was jubilation in our voices as we bounced crazily through the rutted streets, a jubilation that seemed to match the night. It was cold, and the street lights seemed to give off swords of light that stabbed our eyes with their brilliance. Singing blissfully off-key, we continued on our way to grandmother's house.

She was ninety-six years old, alone, and we hadn't spoken to her for almost four years now. A matter of family pride. That morning, a brief call from Grandad suggested we visit her. Gaily, with a "she-can't-kill-us" attitude, we agreed.

The house was old; it seemed to give off an ancient, musty odor. The stairs, worn by a hundred searching canes and more uncertain heavy footsteps, creaked as we tramped noisily to the door. Lace curtains, filthy and faded, were stretched tautly across the window. We opened the door, and stepped into the hallway.

From each of the boarders' rooms, various sounds were emitted. Curious stares from worn, senile faces greeted us, as if to ask, "Why are you here, in this house of the aged?" Admittedly, I felt out of place. We came upon a heavy wooden door, closed. No sound came from behind it but the loud ticking of a clock. We stepped in with false cheerfulness.

"Hello, Gran. How are you?" Our words were addressed to a small, birdlike woman. Her gaunt lined face was upturned, her asthmatic eyes upon us, expressionless behind thick glasses. She struggled up and finally realized we were her great-granddaughters.

Frail, claw-like hands groped out blindly. She muttered incoherently, what sounded like a prayer - joy in the blind old eyes, and broken emotion in her voice,

"Oh, I - I can't believe it."

Throughout her reactions, we stood there, smiling sheepishly, dwarfing her with our youthful size. I made a mental picture of her, and it still remains sharp in my memory.

She was not pretty; I don't think she ever was. Her hair was grey, and sparse, frizzed tightly against a pink scalp. Her face was inter-laced with bluish veins. Her eyes, because of the glasses, loomed owlishly from behind the rims, magnified in their ugliness. She reminded me of something once alive, now dead, wrapped in a ragged cocoon. Her breasts sagged wearily, underneath a black dress, and she smelled. People are like that when they're old.

Naturally, she was glad to see us. While she chatted, because she was so blind, I could let my eyes wander over the unchanged room. Photographs, blurred, of anonymous aunts and uncles, covered the walls. Old magazines papered the chairs. An antique chest of drawers sagged in one corner. It was a depressing, suffocating hole, and yet she was satisfied. She was a wasted piece of flesh, her life was done, and there was nothing she could do. Too blind to read, too deaf to listen to a radio, too crippled to walk. . . she remained in her room the entire day, doing nothing. She clung to the vanities of youth, and when we left, she asked searchingly, "Do you really think I look any thinner?"

She died a week later of a heart attack.

Class History Of '68

NANCY BELL
Class Historian

We have made history – not just as individuals but as the graduating class of 1968. We may look back at our high school years with pride, knowing that each of us has contributed something to our school.

And we have also gained something – experience. That first day at Scona was indeed an experience in itself. Those Seniors had such authority and we were so, so small. After the first week, things brightened up and we engaged in Scona's many activities. Houseleagues, school teams, clubs -- all these were important to us. This was the year to meet and make friends with the hundreds of other students.

Last year we returned ready to blast-off the Centennial year. In October, Lord Strathcona's portrait was unveiled by the Lt. Gov. Grant McEwan and Scona's Centennial plans were introduced. The big event was the Centennial Blast-Off in January. Remember the B.N.A. Cafe, Theatre 102, and La Grande Salle with its Go-go girls, moving lights and closed circuit T.V.? Remember Mr. Wilkie trying to blow out all those candles on our birthday cake? There were other Centennial events -- "Concert Canadiana" in February and the Lawn Party in May. And our Centennial did not end in June. Many of us journeyed to Expo with the Student Safari joining hundreds of other students.

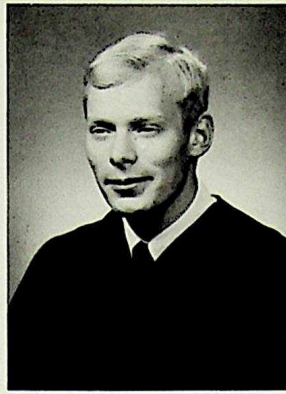

At last, in September, we reached grade twelve -- the pinnacle of one-quarter of our lifetime. We must work hard, for our efforts are summed up in seven short days in June. But besides studies we are involved in other activities. Remember the new houseleagues held this year -- roller skating, Powder Puff hockey, Hula Hooping and Crab-ball? We had a sampling of many activities.

And now we find we must leave all this, but we shall take with us many fond remembrances. It's been a good school life.

Valedictory

So many people have said, so many times, that graduation is not the end of our education, only a step up on the ladder. To disagree with this would be a pleasure. Graduation is the end of several things -- spoonfeeding, having decisions made for you, being pushed in the "right" direction, being moulded into the "right" standards, and being indoctrinated with the "right" ideals. Well, no matter what you are now, you are on your own!

The time has come to fit or misfit, as the case may be, into society. At the same time, however, we are handed the chance and responsibility of changing the society. Up to this point, the thought of young people affecting change within the society has been looked on with contempt. This is a concept thoroughly reinforced by the educational system. It is now that the opportunities and responsibilities of change begin to arise. It would be very easy to simply drop out of society, and idly hurl criticism against the solid wall of tradition. Indeed, many people, hippies and the like, have done this, but have met with little success in causing change. An equally well-traveled escape route is the apathy path. Perhaps we may take comfort in the fact that "those who don't give a damn may soon get one."

No! once we decide that change, responsible change, not change for the sake of change, is necessary, we must realize that it can best be achieved from within the framework of society. If we wish to mould a better world, we must first take up strong positions in the world as it stands. Even so the ideals we seek cannot be easily attained. The future before us is not bright and rosy. Life is a rat race! If we want to improve it, we must become intensely involved in this world, and we must be prepared to suffer. All I can honestly say is "Goodluck! "

Major Trophies

Wees Trophy

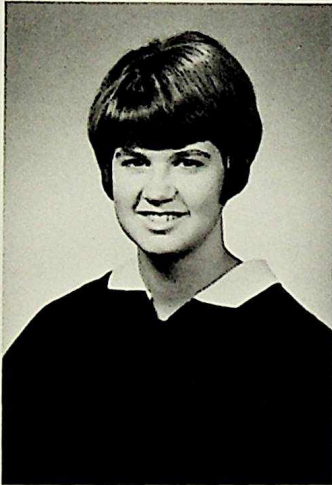

Maria Klawe

The original Wees Cup, donated in 1929 by Dr. W.R. Wees of Toronto, was replaced several years ago by a new Wees Trophy. It is presented annually to the Grade Twelve student who attains the highest average on the January and Easter Examinations.

Maria Klawe, this year's winner, attained an average of 91.58 o/o on these examinations. In addition to this excellent scholastic record, Maria has made a significant contributoin to the furthering of the Fine Arts within the school. She has been a conscientious member of the Art Club for three years and has also been a member of the school orchestra and Pep Band. During Centennial Year, Maria was responsible for several folk singing concerts and poetry "happenings" and her artistic talents could be seen in the numerous Art Displays and colourful decorations around the school. She has also found time to be a member of the Activities Board and the TRICOLOR Executive. Maria's creative and artistic contributions to student activities have earned her Major Service Awards in Grade Eleven and Grade Twelve. As winner of the Wees Trophy, Maria has the honour to be the Valedictorian of the Graduating Class of 1968.

Griesdorf Trophy

Nancy Bell

This trophy was donated by David Griesdorf, a former student of this school. It is presented annually to the girl in the Graduating class most outstanding for her service and participation in extracurricular activities.

This year's winner and Class Historian, Nancy Bell, has been an Honors Student in Grade Ten, Grade Eleven and Grade Twelve. As an undergraduate, Nancy was Girls' Co-ordinator on the Students' Union Executive, a member of the Activities Board and a Red House Captain for Houseleague events. She was a member of the Senior Volleyball team, the Junior and Senior Basketball teams and an enthusiastic cheerleader. She served on the Girls' Houseleague Council for three years and was also a member of the Modelling Club, the Badminton Club and the Curling Club. Nancy has received Major Athletic Awards and Major Service Awards for her outstanding contribution to the extracurricular life of the school.

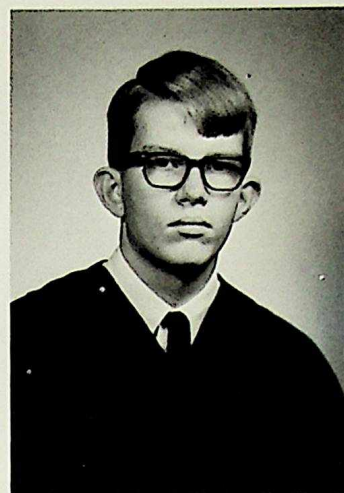

AWARDS BOARD

The 1968 Awards Board consisted of Miss Dodds, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Stratte, Mr. Breitzkrentz, Mrs. Current, Mr. Kruger, Mr. Cassidy, Bill Avison, Brian Stelck, Cathie Smith, and Mrs. Bernard.

Scarborough Trophy

The Scarborough Trophy was donated by the Students' Union in 1952 in memory of Mr. Charles Scarborough, a former teacher of Strathcona High School. It is presented annually to a boy of the graduating class who best possesses the qualities Mr. Scarborough admired most - outstanding service and academic achievement.

Bill Avison is a worthy recipient of the Scarborough Trophy. Bill has been Students' Union President during this busy Diamond Jubilee Year of 1968 and he has handled all his presidential duties in an exceptionally efficient manner. He has been a member of the School Orchestra and has also found time to be the manager of the Senior Basketball Team for three years. Bill has won Major Service Awards in Grade Ten, Grade Eleven and Grade Twelve and yet he has still been able to achieve an Honors standing in each of his high school grades.

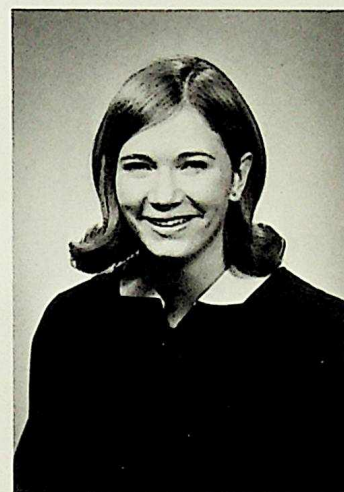

Bill Avison

Duncan Innes Trophy

The Duncan Innes Trophy is presented by the Strathcona Home and School Association to the girl in the graduating class who is a good all-round citizen and who combines academic performance with sportsmanship, leadership and service in the field of athletics.

The winner this year is Vicki Cox. During her high school years Vicki has been a member of almost every school team including the Senior Basketball team, the Junior and Senior Volleyball teams, the school Badminton team and the Track and Field team. She has also been an enthusiastic supporter of all Houseleague activities. In 1967, Vicki was presented with a Gold Centennial Award for Physical Fitness. Besides maintaining a satisfactory academic record, Vicki has also been a Room Representative, a Senior Cheerleader and the winner of Major Athletic Awards in Grade Ten, Grade Eleven and Grade Twelve.

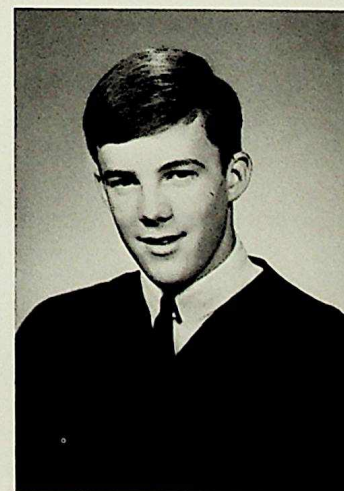

Vicki Cox

Harley-Millar-Sutton Trophy

This trophy is presented annually to the male student of the graduating class who is outstanding as an athlete, as a good student and as a man. It was donated by Brigadier-General B.F. MacDonald in memory of Pilot Officer John William Harley, Flying Officer John Whitla Millar and Flight Lieutenant Harold Ransom Sutton. These three young men, who attended Strathcona High School, were killed in World War II.

This year the trophy is presented to Gordon McKenzie. Gordon has actively participated in extracurricular sports and has also maintained a satisfactory academic record. Gordon has been a member of the Junior and Senior Basketball teams, the Junior and Senior Football teams, the Junior Volleyball team, the school Badminton team and the Track and Field team. Gordon has won both Major and Minor Athletic Awards for his outstanding qualities of leadership and sportsmanship.
